USPA News - Al-Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula (AQAP) announced Thursday that a senior leader best known for claiming responsibility for the Charlie Hebdo attack in Paris was killed in a U.S. drone strike recently. His eldest son was also among those killed.

The group announced the news in an 11-minute Arabic-language video posted to file-sharing websites. The SITE Intelligence Group, which translated the remarks, said the video confirmed that senior commander Nasser bin Ali al-Ansi had been killed in a U.S. drone strike along with his eldest son and other fighters. It was not immediately clear when the U.S. drone strike took place.
